The Hypogeum of Santa Maria in Stelle (commonly known as “the Pantheon”) is an archaeological site and a place of Christian worship; the only one of its kind.

The Hypogeum, from the Greek ὑπό «below» and γῆ «ground», owes its name to its conformation: the site presents itself as an underground temple branching out below the parish church of Santa Maria Assunta.

It was first built to be a Roman aqueduct and has undergone many changes over the centuries: from a nymphaeum dedicated to worshipping water to a baptismal font, well as being a destination for medieval pilgrimages.

Its frescoes are precious, dating back to the 4th and 5th centuries A.D.: they are unique for their style, originality and excellent state of preservation.

The site is extremely delicate, we therefore kindly ask you to check the visitors’ information (days, times, maximum number of visitors and costs) on our www.ipogeostelle.it.
